Cause in my app i display a progress bar while downloading many photos from the internet. My application can take very long. In this time i would like to know how many files are downloaded/uploaded. is there any leak in thread or the system. I also set a lot of matrix values. Is there any memory leak in thread or the system? Thanks in advance A: Leak in thread means that you are still accessing your object in the memory even when there is no longer any reference to it. This is an error in your code, which means that you are using your object when it is no longer valid. If you think that the object is still used somewhere then you don't have a leak, it is something else. Leak means you are corrupting the memory. I don't know where you have come up with the idea of a thread leak. There are no thread leaks. You can only leak data structures that you have allocated using new. A: I think you might be thinking of a memory leak when you say 'thread leak'. When a thread finishes executing there is a function called finalize which gets called. It is the responsibility of the programmer to make sure that memory allocated for a object is cleanly released when the thread object itself is garbage collected.
