The hardworking Tottenham team at White Hart Lane fell to defeat in tonight's top of the table Premier League match against Manchester United in a game decided by two late goals in the final minutes of the game. It was the first of four matches that the Spurs team will play in the next seven days and it was a match that saw the team begin in similarly poor form as the opening Premier League game against Aston Villa. Spurs, who had won just one of their opening five matches, were dominated for large parts of the match, particularly by the four-man United midfield. This left the Spurs back four providing a solid base against United's attackers. This proved invaluable as United's front three of Javier Hernández, Wayne Rooney and Anthony Martial all missed chances and ultimately the home team were undone by United's brilliance in front of goal. Playing down the middle with Mauricio Pochettino's preferred 4-3-3 formation, United looked very much in control of the match. Spurs' midfield often struggled to keep up with the United attackers and they inevitably fell behind in the contest. United's back four were absolutely superb in tonight's match. A solid, solid shield for Wayne Rooney in the centre of the park, Jordan Henderson and Eric Dier forming a partnership in front of the centre-backs, Jonny Evans and Chris Smalling providing cover. All four of United's centre-backs were excellent tonight and collectively they were so dominant in the centre of the park that Spurs' wingers struggled to get a foothold in the match. For Tottenham, on the flip side, Spurs' midfielders provided a great deal of driving force in the game, particularly Mousa Dembélé and Dele Alli. Playing a little higher up the pitch, the Tottenham midfielders made excellent runs up the channel in possession. This provided the much-needed energy to the back four and at times Spurs looked a completely different team to the team
