* Adobe Photoshop CS4 Extended Training * Adobe Photoshop CS4 Classroom in a Book, by Josh Noel and Lisa Yang, provides a creative start to a Photoshop exploration. * Mastering Photoshop CS4 Extended, by Jeffrey Power and David B. Williams, is another great step-by-step guide and includes a photo book, which is a collection of impressive photo projects that cover a variety of approaches and techniques. Even after you've mastered Photoshop, you still may find that there are other software applications that can alter and edit an image to suit your needs. However, Photoshop isn't the only game in town. In some cases, you may want to change an image even before creating a digital photo. ## Post-Import Editing After you've downloaded a high-quality digital photograph, you can instantly start altering the image and making changes to the color, exposure, lighting, and composition of the photo. You might want to do this instead of starting with a blank canvas. Here are a few of the more common ways you can make changes to a photo before saving it to a computer: * Use Adobe Lightroom to edit an image before adding it to a print layout, placing it in a group, or saving it to your computer. * Capture the scene using your camera, and then crop or change the settings before uploading the photo to an online photo-sharing site. * Use graphics software such as Adobe Photoshop or Paint Shop Pro to enhance an image that has already been scanned. Some programs have their own features that can easily edit images for you. It's easy to take a picture with your camera and easily crop the image by using the features built into the software or software that comes with the camera. # EDITING THE ENHANCEMENTS As you can see, adjusting color, exposure, and lighting are quite easy. Lightroom works in the same way as Photoshop, and the interface is similar, so if you know how to work with Photoshop, you can easily modify the color in Lightroom. You can work in 16-bit or 32-bit color settings. A bit simply refers to the quantity of colors available to a person viewing an image. If the image is displayed in a computer monitor, it appears in 8 bits of color with 256 colors. If the image is displayed on a computer hard drive, it appears in 16-bit color with 65

[The treatment of severe burn from herbicide and insecticide]. In recent years, the incidence of severe burn caused by herbicide and insecticide burns has increased. This was a retrospective study on the treatment of severe burn from herbicide and insecticide, the mechanisms of injury, and the outcomes. Case series study. Retrospective study of severe burn cases in the burn center of the first hospital of Jilin University from Jan. 1995 to Dec. 2005, with a treatment scheme of early excision and fluid resuscitation. A total of 61 cases of severe burn from herbicide and insecticide (mean total burn area 46.0% TBSA, and 32.8% of burn area in a single area) were studied. The mean age of the patients was 34 years, and males accounted for 88.7%. The wounds were primarily located on the hand, extremities and foot, and the body was mostly exposed to wind-blown herbicide and insecticide. The mechanism of injury was primarily compression-induced local burn (56.6%), followed by thermal burn (23.0%), and chemical burn (10.4%). The overall mortality rate was 22.0% (13/61). Patients who could not be rescued within 24 hours had a significantly lower survival rate than those rescued after 24 hours (12.5% vs. 66.7%, $P=0.01$). Wound healing time was significantly shortened by early excision of the burned area ($P=0.03$), and the mortality rate of patients with early excision of the burned area was higher than that of those without early excision (43.8% vs. 0%, $P=0.02$). The mortality rate of patients with burns caused by exposure to herbicide and insecticide was significantly higher than that in patients with burns from other causes (43.8% vs. 3.6%, $P=0.003$), but there was no difference in survival rate between the 2 groups. The mortality rate of patients with burns complicated by inhalation injury was higher than that of those without (53.8% vs. 7.1%, $P=0.001$) but the survival rate of patients with inhalation injury was higher than that of those without (78.3% vs. 0%, $P=0.001$). There were no difference in the survival rate and mortality rate of patients with different ages and types of injury. The relationship between mortality and burn area was explored. The mortality rate of patients with burns not exceeding 20%
