When posting on the forums and across various social media, about desktop usage and/or laptop usage, and such, we get a lot of questions from users regarding their hardware and such. If you agree with our strategy of only posting information pertaining to our readers, since we know this is a major point of concern for most Linux users, especially when discussing hardware with other people, I'd like to motivate what we are doing with:

What we've done, for this holiday season, we'll be organizing a survey.

Since this is a major issue for most Linux users, and we all love Linux, and can't stand the thought of any additional loses of any sort (heard the new ThinkPad Max's audio issue before it was known), we can do so much better.

So, for this year, we'll be asking users to provide details on:

- 1) Hardware, whether a laptop or desktop
- 2) Laptop information

Q: Is it possible for a US Senator to be impeached over an affair when he has a daughter? On a number of news sources, Senator John Ensign has been called to resign from the Senate after several woman have publicly accused him of an affair with a former staff member. Now, as a person who is still trying to build a career and influence within the political world, is there ever going to be a scenario where a politician is impeached and they have a daughter who is in high school/junior college? A: Yes, this has happened before. The impeachment proceedings against Bill Clinton that resulted in his removal from office included an allegation of sexual misconduct, which arguably led to the impeachment proceedings. Clinton's main argument was that such an allegation was unfair to women, and indeed the proceedings included a so-called "Schedule B" where the committee heard evidence about Clinton's sexual history. Because it was a very personal attack on Clinton, it is not at all clear how it would have worked out for the Senate at the time. It is not hard to imagine that, with Clinton's Democratic Senate supporters losing credibility, and the Republicans gaining the seats vacated by Democrats who voted to remove Clinton, the Republicans might have had enough support to win. The first question then is whether the Republican senators who voted against Clinton in that case would vote the same way. This might be impossible to know, but we know that some of them are less of a factor in the current Senate than they were then. The second question is whether the Republicans actually gained the four seats they needed to win a majority. There was speculation that this actually happened, but there is some doubt on that point. How I Built an Anaconda Botnet A few days ago, I was sitting in this coffee shop and some clever newbie started chatting with me on IRC, which I use to communicate with fellow Linux fanatics, a lot. The conversation started to get on topic and we started talking about a lot of things, and in the middle of the discussion he shared that he was building a botnet, and that he'd be happy to help me out for a short amount of time. My reply was that I didn't want to start playing bad guys, and also that I'd prefer to build my own botnet using Linux and Python if possible bff6bb2d33
