You can now get any app from your Creative Cloud account right from your phone!Amazon.com has launched a new version of the Echo Look camera, which will be available for $99. The new Echo Look camera will be able to do more than just take snaps and keep an eye on you in the evening — it will help you find clothes that fit, show you how your makeup looks on your smartphone, warn you when you’re about to leave the house, and more. The Echo Look is designed to give you a daily glance at how you’re looking without having to actually look in the mirror. The idea is that you should be able to monitor your outfit in real-time and correct it before you leave the house. You won’t be able to access your clothing preferences or your last purchases to make these suggestions, but the Echo Look will scan your closet to give you suggestions based on your size. It has an in-built liquid-crystal display and a built-in microphone so that you can, for example, ask it to show you the clothes you bought two days ago. The gadget will also let you get your beauty report via Alexa. You can ask it to give you a little pep talk and it’s got the capability to see how your makeup looks on your smartphone and recommend what you should wear if you’re going out. “If you’re trying to figure out what to wear in an outfit, you can ask Alexa to show you how your makeup looks on your phone and give you a confidence boost,” Jeff Bezos, Amazon CEO and founder said in a statement. “If you’re worried about what to wear for a big event, you can ask Alexa to show you how your outfit could look on your big day.” The Echo Look will be available from Amazon.com starting on Wednesday.
