be “one of the best gifts you can give yourself.” Dying is supposed to be frightening, but it is not if you have a set death plan. You will have other people, like the hospital, do much of the work. You don’t want to be a burden. People are unpredictable. You don’t know what will happen, but you make a plan for what you do know, and you prepare in advance. You do not want to stress out your family. If there are kids, you want them to be able to understand and say goodbye, and that they know they will see you again. If possible, you want to see and be with people you love. It is important to have spiritual closure. You want to be cremated or to have your ashes buried. You would like your ashes spread at a favorite beach or park. You should not be an organ donor, because in the United States, there is a shortage of organs, and the chance you will need an organ in the near future is very low. You should not be on the national registry.

Your thoughts Have you ever faced the possibility of dying? If so, how did you deal with the process? We are living in a country where there is a great deal of stress and anxiety, and you are far more likely to die in your home than in the hospital. Is this a real issue? Is it the best way to face death? Welcome to our new player profile page for Christopher Howard. Vastai drew our attention to a cricketer who has been quietly progressing in the game. He went T20 full-time a few years ago, was drafted in England's warm-ups for the 2013 World T20, then went to SSC a couple of years later and started well there. His 141 is his best tournament so far, though he only took one wicket. He finished as England's second-highest wicket-taker in the domestic T20 tournaments. He is obviously not a short-form specialist but with the IPL and a full season (or two) as the Trinbago Knight Riders' back-up for their keeper Rohan Karunaratne, he has time to develop. It's a heck of a story. He's an impressive seamer with a full

Supporting the Ministries At St. Andrew's we aim to support the whole of our community – it's why we decided to merge our growing community groups into one Church this year. We're thankful for those involved in running our groups to support us in this process. In addition, we've decided to do a lot more of the big things at St. Andrew's. This means we've decided to hire two Community Workers to help us support our young people and our older people, as well as offering more support to our church family and to our visitors and the many people who use our services. We're grateful for all those who can help us in this work. You can support us in our ministry by following these links:

"happiness" is extremely subjective. In fact, when reading the Classical Theory of Value, economists don't talk about utility much. The utility of an object is simply the lowest possible increase in utility (or "happiness") that the subject can achieve. If what someone seeks is money, then the utility of that person may be deemed to be $20.
