I have not seen a huge difference between the main Windows versions of 2012 and 2013, however it is worth mentioning. Microsoft released Windows Server 2012 R2 in September 2012 and Windows Server 2013 in July 2013. Both versions have been improved for scalability, fault tolerance, infrastructure, security and management. They both are backward compatible for all previous versions. Windows Server 2012 R2 introduces Hyper-V, RemoteFX, Dynamic Disks and Storage Spaces among other new features. Windows Server 2013 introduces parallel backup and replication, Windows Server 2012 R2 has remote access functionality and introduced Multi-Factor Authentication. They both are built on a solid foundation for the current and future requirements of enterprises.
