.Q: Can't set up 2 emulators with different device names with 2 emulators I'm developing a nodejs and react app and for some reason I need to set up 2 emulators at the same time on Mac OS but they have to be launched with different device names. I'm using expo and the default XCode so I have 4 projects: -XCode project -React Native project -Nodejs project -iOS project I had to set up 2 emulators on different ports with different names to get it to work: In the iOS project Open the scheme in run settings in the device choose the device type Create a new scheme In the XCode project Run "open.xcodeproj" in terminal Create a new Scheme in the Run (or Debug) scheme in the first tab Run the app in the iOS emulator In the XCode project Run "open.xcworkspace" in terminal Reopen the scheme in the run(or debug) scheme in the first tab Also in the Nodejs project, I had to set up 2 emulators with different device names to get it to work: In the nodejs project Open the npm package In the package.json, add the args {ios.simulator:IOS_DEVICE_NAME,simulator:iPad_DEVICE_NAME} run the npm run start script in the terminal rm -rf node_modules npm install Reopen the package.json file and remove the args Run the npm run start script But they don't work at the same time, when I launch the app in the iOS emulator I get this message in the console: but when I launch the app in the nodejs emulator it works fine Has somebody already come across this issue? A: The expo doesn't support 2 emulators at the same time on MacOS. Q: Rowspan of fixed sized divs, with pull in and out I am trying to make a div that is always sized at a fixed width, but is divided by other divs into 2 or more columns. This works fine, but 6d1f23a050
