This version optimizes the compatibility of the FLASH-command to the combination of:Â .Q: Creating the smallest image as a file extension I have a product server script that outputs I'm wondering what would be the best way to go about adding a "-small" file extension to these so that.jpg.small becomes.jpg, and.jpg.small.jpg becomes.jpg.js? EDIT: I also need to add that my products are displayed out in tables in a wordpress loop. I am trying to take advantage of the logic used in their featured images (which use image and caption and filename.jpg to create the right size and filename when a featured image is clicked on). I haven't managed to figure this one out yet, if anyone could shed some light on this. A: I think that you are looking for this: You should also look into the.htaccess rules you are using to contain the filenames. The above image will end up looking like: // Copyright (c) Microsoft Corporation.
