manual.Effects of levodopa on metabolic parameters and endogenous dopamine in mice. For diagnosis of the pathomechanism of Parkinson's disease, metabolic parameters and endogenous dopamine are examined in mice. Human patients who showed small dopamine deficiency may have normal endogenous dopamine levels. In order to examine endogenous dopamine levels in mice, the extrapyramidal system was chemically lesioned with 4-hydroxyphenyl(2H)-2-aminopropionic acid.

The metabolic parameters (glucose, triglyceride, cholesterol, nonesterified fatty acid) and the concentration of free fatty acid decreased significantly in the lesioned mice. Treatment with levodopa/carbidopa increased all these parameters and endogenous dopamine levels. These results suggest that endogenous dopamine levels in the mutant mice were decreased by lesioning of the extrapyramidal system.) by the Court and the State over the objections of the defense. The State also raised the issue in its motion to reopen the evidence, and the defense had an opportunity to address it. The circuit court's subsequent statement to the jury in the instruction conference simply states the inherent lack of relevance of the evidence of the circumstances of the events of the previous trial and trial results. There is no evidence the circuit court intended to convey a message from the bench to the jury that it was lessening the State's burden of proof. c6a93da74d
