KEYMACRO Description:Cerro de la Vega Cerro de la Vega is an archeological site in the Andes Mountains of Peru. It has been an active archeological site since at least the ancient Pasca civilization (c. 1000 BC), when it was important enough to be mentioned in a list of archaeological sites of Peru. Cerro de la Vega contains the Tambos Paracas cemetery, which is a site of significant archeological importance. References Category:Archaeological sites in Peru Category:Archaeological sites in Ancash RegionWhile the Green Bay Packers have relied heavily on outside free agency in recent years, they have once again been active. Thanks to the first round of NFL free agency, which ended on March 9, the Packers have a number of holes that they will need to fill. One of those holes is quarterback, and the Packers have started to look at some of the options on the open market. While Aaron Rodgers has been rumored to have his sights set on joining another NFL franchise, the Packers still have interest in veteran quarterbacks like Trevor Siemian, Brock Osweiler and Jay Cutler. One of the top choices of Packers quarterback targets has reportedly been Cutler, a source with knowledge of his situation told ESPN's Adam Schefter. The source said that the feeling among some in the Bears' organization is that they need to move on from Cutler and that they will likely try to trade him before the March 12 deadline. They are looking to acquire a quarterback who can start Week 1 and they would love to add a young quarterback in order to avoid wasting another year of his prime. Cutler is 32-years-old and a free agent, but that is much different than most quarterbacks. Rodgers, 38, and Joe Flacco, 35, are examples of quarterbacks who are still playing at a high level even at such an advanced age. The Packers are being aggressive in bringing in some veteran free agent quarterbacks, but they are still hoping to sign Rodgers to a long-term extension. Cutler is still a good quarterback, but he has struggled with injuries throughout his career and he has 2edc1e01e8
