It's a retelling of the myth of Prometheus, that all-powerful Titan who stole the fire of Hephaestus to give it to man, and thus created a race of gods. The story is set in the eighteenth century and tells the tale of a group of young women from Newgate prison, who are sold as prostitutes, and for whom then all-powerful and wealthy Sir Francis Dashwood offers to buy them. I really liked the book, mostly because it was a blast of stark, unusual prose by Fiona Ross; her extraordinary use of language, description and plot construction was very like a Jack Reacher novel. I liked that almost all the characters had a gimmick (and/or show-off), and I like the love triangle, with Ashburnham in the middle (he's the one whose reputation is falsely ruined). I liked the study of the power of money, and the run-up to the action, in the build-up to the escape, the revelations about the characters, their relationships and the setting. I liked the way that the crux of
